Arrived Lynchburg at 6:30 this morning. Jamie met us. It was marvelous to see him. We got to Staunton Hill and I never in my life was so glad to be anywhere. The day was cold and divinely clear. We had a huge breakfast. Then to the most pleasant of all occupations, visiting one's farm. Things were in surprisingly good order except for many trees felled by hurricane "Hazel". A large branch had been torn away from the huge ash at the end of the new colonnade. It fell athwart a mass of dwarf box, to the ruin of the latter.
